Peter's Pence Collection

Today we recall the apostolic journey of Pope Benedict XVI to the United States and his call to us to cast the light of Christ upon the world. We can show our solidarity with the Holy Father and our suffering brothers and sisters abroad through our support of this week's Collection. These funds allow him to provide emergency assistance to victims of war, disaster, oppression, and disease. Please be generous in today's Peter's Pence Collection.

Good News!

June 28, 2009

Thirteenth Sunday in Ordinary Time

Wis 1:13–15; 2:23–24; 2 Cor 8:7, 9, 13–15

Mk 5:21–43 or 5:21–24, 35b–43

We're built for awe. Humans are worshipers. Through most of human history, humans have worshiped gods or God. Not everyone believes, of course. In more modern times, atheism has become an intellectually defended position. Does it work? What does it lose? What questions and instincts does it leave ignored?

It's interesting to ask of any human, what holds you in awe? Is there something, even if it is hard to put into words, that you stand before and admit, this is bigger than I am?

If we don't find awe in God, we will likely find it somewhere else. That could mean asking something finite (money, power, people, sex, you name it) to do the job of the infinite. That could mean idolatry. If we deny our capacity for awe altogether, where does that leave us? Cynicism? Depression? Naturalism?

If we admit our instincts for worship then, when we see it in each other, we might come together. If we have a wow response, we might ask what is behind this. Who is behind this? We may come together to praise God.

Worship isn't about psyching ourselves up to create awe. It's about waking ourselves up before the reality of God and what God is giving us.

Many of us have heard people ask, why go to church when I can experience God in nature? Maybe we should raise another question: why is this an either/or choice?

Those who see God in nature—we should invite them into the assembly of those in awe so they can wake us up even more. Take us with you the next time you go hiking or kayaking! Those who know the awe of worship—can we find a way to connect to those outside?

INDEPENDENCE DAY

A humble thought

I clearly recognize that all good is in God alone, and that in me, without Divine Grace, there is nothing but deficiency. The one sole thing in myself in which I glory, is that I see in myself nothing in which I can glory.
